Going Beyond-Perceptions of Sustainability in Heritage Studies No. 2, Heritage Studies Series

Sustainability in regard to heritage is more important than ever in view such dynamics as climate change, the stereotyping of intangible heritage, migration processes, the phenomena of gentrification, shrinking cities and related musealisation of historic city centres. Last but not least, the need for sustainability has become a pressing issue in light of rapid technological change, which also affects the field of documentary heritage preservation.

E-book Cultural Resources Strategy for Regional Development - The CCC-Method

This publication presents the main conclusions of the transnational cooperation project “Cultural Capital Counts”, implemented through the CENTRAL EUROPE Programme co-financed by the ERDF. It is a common publication of 10 partner from 6 countries. The IGS Heritage Studies participated in this endeavour as project partner and specialised advisor on Intangible Cultural Heritage (ICH). The aim of the project was to identify sustainable strategies for the valorisation of ICH in the context of regional development.
